Second Nature at CMH

Since our founding in 1965, we have always felt a deep sense of responsibility to care for the mountain environments and communities where we operate. We are proud of the efforts we have made in the past, but know there is much more we can do to minimize our impact on the environment and enrich communities.

In 2000, we formalized this commitment to stewardship by establishing our Second Nature program. This employee-driven program strives to link all of our operations, training, research and business development to our vision and goals for sustainability.

The Second Nature Committee continues to evolve with members taking on greater responsibility for achieving our sustainability goals, taking on leadership roles for many initiatives outlined in this report including the President's Awards for Environmental Initiative and Community Stewardship, in-house training, education, research, and energy conservation projects.

With 500 employees spread out over 14 unique operations and offices, the Second Nature team is seen as enablers and informed cheerleaders for our sustainability initiatives. Their role is to identify issues specific to their lodge or department, develop plans to improve, work with their colleagues to make this happen, and then track and report on the results. Through their efforts, we hope to see continued reductions in our foot-print and growth in our community support.
